Lecture 1 - The new EU institutional reality – political and institutional landscape for future integration

No other EU reform treaty has been in force as long as the Treaty of Lisbon. The time since its entry into force at the end of 2009 has been marked by reform fatigue, tensions over its implementation and finally ever louder voices promoting changes in EU's constitutional design, all against the backdrop of financial and economic crises, the migration wave and Brexit. With the Conference on the future of Europe well under way the lecture will examine the current institutional reality and highlight the main issues and the directions of the ongoing debate over the EU's institutional design.

Lecture 2: Decision-making in the EU – the new dynamics in relations between the Member States and EU institutions

Carefully crafted relations written down in the Treaty of Lisbon to guide relations between the actors involved in EU decision-making have been challenged amidst factors such as the global financial and economic crises, the rise of populism, the growing concern over EU's security in the newly shaping global constellation of powers, Brexit and finally the COVID-19 crises. This lecture outlines the main contours of EU's decision-making procedures and sheds light on the changing relations between the Union and the Member States as well as between the EU's institutions also within the institutions themselves.
